

IRREGULAR Year in Review

Chris Baldwin finishes the job of taking down a landmark tree in Stratton estimated by some to be nearly 300 years old. The tree had died the previous winter and was a hazard.

School. Geraldine "Jebbie" Campbell retired after serving 35 years as a fourth grade teacher in Phillips. Grams softball team of Phillips took the championship in the North Franklin Men's Softball Tournament. Phillips' Old Home Days celebrated its 50th year with all the trimmings including choosing Sheriff Denis Pike as the Honored Person. Copious amounts of rain were causing difficulties for many including blueberry growers, those cultivating corn and trying to harvest wood from the soggy forests. Clem and Rolande Begin of Carrabassett Valley donated $1.76 million between Maine Huts and Trails, Carrabassett Valley Academy, Carrabassett Valley Public Library & Community Center and the Sugarloaf Ski Club. Nine-year-old Leah Cuetara of Winslow, who was reported missing on a Saturday morning, was found the following Sunday afternoon after an extensive search.

September

Work on the Kibby Wind Power project was underway. The TransCanada project was slated to span Kibby Mountain and Kibby Range in Kibby and Skinner townships and include 44 wind turbines. Warren Cook, of Carrabassett Valley, was named Saddleback Maine's new CEO. While the MSAD #58 Board of Directors opposed it, members sent a revised consolidation plan to Augusta as required by state law. In turn the state approved the plan leaving its fate in the hands of voters.

October

School consolidation continued to be a hot topic as the MSAD #58 Board of Directors developed a brochure designed to help voters consider the pros and cons of consolidating; and in fact recommended a "No" vote. Sugarloaf announced that more than $5 million in improvements would greet Sugarloafers when the resort opened for the season. It was also noted that since the mountain joined the Boyne Resorts family, more than $9 million had been spent. WSKI-TV 17 and Time-Warner
