July 31, 2006, a burglary at Scoops Ice Cream Shop on Main Street was reported to police, he said. A total of $796.30 was taken.

From information provided, the young men entered the shop sometime between 11 and 12 p.m. The shop closed at 10 but the suspects entered through an open window. Because they had been inside numerous times, they knew where the cash was kept, he said.

Police had no suspects at that time and the case grew colder, not even listed in the police's current computer program that dates back to September of 2006 and Leahy couldn't find it.

He called the ice cream shop owners who remembered talking to police on the first of August of that year which led him back to find the initial paper reports on the incident.

The owners were happy to finally have the three charged, he said.

MRS is valued at $18,867,500 and was added to the books this year for the 2010 proposed state valuation.

Other increases, Marble noted, were due with a four percent rise in what's sometimes called in the business as the "coastal and southern Maine effect."

This effect puts a generalized and overall wide-spread increase on all property values in the town.

The town's new valuation will be used in the school funding formulas for the 2012 budget cycle.

As explained by Superintendent Quenten Clark, Kingfield's percentage in the local share of education will increase. However, the majority of the burden lies on the brunt of the newly developed tax base and not on the individual or existing taxpayers.

closed," said Pease.

"I hardly know what the North Village looks like it's been so long since I have been able to go up there with the bridge closed for the past six months," Pease, who lives across from the school, said.

The bridge is scheduled to re-open on Nov. 6 (much to the delight of residents).

Buster Pinkham said that he and his wife, Judy, are extremely excited about the purchase of the school, "We're just having a great time right now dreaming about what we want to see in the building." One of those possibilities is elderly housing, which everyone knows is a need in the area but Pinkham said he is open to suggestions.

"Right now, my main objective is to get all the pipes drained before winter," said Pinkham.

"It's a nice building," said Pinkham and he should know after going through six years of school there and graduating in 1961.
